“Training on Improved Risk Management Tools for Organic Inspectors (IRM-ORGANIC)”

Background

Controls according to the EU-legislation (Reg. (EC) No. 834/2007 and implementing rules) on organic production shall assure consumer confidence into organic products in the member states of the European Union. The controls are implemented by control authorities or control bodies, accredited by an accreditation body according to EN 45011/ISO 17065 and approved and supervised by competent authorities. All control authorities and control bodies are required to conduct regular trainings for their inspectors according to the needs identified by regular performance reviews addressing the individual training needs of staff and inspectors.

In the innovation transfer project “Training on Improved Risk Management Tools for Organic Inspectors (IRM-ORGANIC)” the project partners developed a train-the-trainer concept for organic inspectors based on the results of a need analysis, current training concepts in the countries of the project partners and the training concepts in adjacent control and certification programs for food and feed.

More information on the project can be found at www.irm-organic.eu .
